Eva Myers-Barnes, a genealogist at FamilyTreeDNA, gives her perspective on the history of genealogy and DNA. What advice would she give to the newly interested in genealogy? Would she encourage folks to stick with a story-telling style or go more technical? How does personal experience shape the work of genealogy? With all the focus on DNA, we still have yet to really bring DNA to the public. How would you approach a first-time owner of FamilyTreeDNA (e.g., someone who can't afford a subscription)? Almost everywhere in the US (except for West Virginia) can now get a copy of their DNA. I think that it is just easier to get a kit from a local testing lab, as it eliminates the fuss and the expense of ordering through FamilyTreeDNA.
