Q: Convert coordinates from Geodjango reverse geocoder results to latitude/longitude I'm using the django-geodjango library in a django app to get geocoding from a users IP address. This has been working fine, however now I want to move the results into my own database instead of GeoDjango's backend. The problem is, GeoDjango stores the results as lat, lon (lat-long), but then when I save them to my own backend using MySQLdb I can't get it to convert the coordinates. I've tried explicitly converting it to a decimal, converting the lon/lat from degrees to decimal, and a few other methods. How do I go about getting the coordinates into my database correctly? This is my latest attempt:

def process_result(result): client = geodjango.client.GeoClient() client.reverse(result['locations'], lat=result['lat']) 1d6a3396d6
